Craies on Legislation

Significant changes and developments in the way legislation is made, applied and interpreted in the UK occur all the time. The volume and complexity of legislation, the establishment of the devolved legislatures, the influence of the European Union and use of secondary legislation all make it increasingly difficult for practitioners to know how to follow and apply, and sometimes challenge, the legislation that is relevant to their clients in every area of the law. Craies on Legislation aims to give practitioners the up-to-date guidance they need about the nature, process, effect and interpretation of legislation. The first supplement to the 10th edition brings the mainwork up to date with the latest developments.
