The Victorian City

Originally published in two volumes, The Victorian City was a major landmark, particularly in the study of the social and intellectual attitudes of Victorian society to the challenge of urbanization. Unique in its many-sided approach to the total phenomenon of the city, this set deals on many levels with the city environment and includes: * discussion of the city's growth, fabric, institutions, health, poverty, politics, religion, diversions * analysis of the ways in which artists, photographers and ordinary people responded to these new landscapes * rich illustrations from contemporary photographs, lantern slides, magazine illustrations, paintings and other material, much of which was published here for the first time. The books will appeal to a very wide general audience and command the attention of a wide range of scholars - historians, literary and art historians, social scientists, and architects and town planners. This set is also available in two volumes: * Volume One: 0-415-19323-0: 428pp: £125.00 * Volume Two: 0-415-19324-9: 532pp: £125.00
